

World-Class Education

Dear Colleagues:

I am pleased to announce a new initiative at Kean University and I encourage you to take part. The KU Center for History, Politics and Policy, under the leadership of Dr. Terry Golway, will be unveiling its new website and a White Paper series this September to explore public policy issues of which many of us are deeply engaged – education, economics, science, technology, and health care. The white paper series is intended to generate ideas and foster discussions, across disciplines and across campuses, related to issues of public importance.

Faculty and senior administrators are encouraged to submit a one-page proposal that provides a precise overview of the policy issue you would like to address and why. The authors of accepted proposals will be invited to submit a 4-7 page white paper for editorial consideration. Dr. Leila Sadeghi and Dr. Kathe Callahan will serve as the editors of this series and white papers accepted for publication will be featured on the Center website and will be promoted through University Relations.

For a description of the series, proposal format, and possible topics; please click here.

We hope you will consider pursuing this publication option, as an important component of community service and outreach.

Sincerely,

Dr. Jeffrey H. Toney
Vice President for Academic Affairs